IN TOUCH

fashion trauma Even celebs

Comedian Sue Costello says:

"If you had to wear this, you'd throw up on your boots, too!"

Hilary Duff seems to be trying to veer away from her squeaky-clean image with this rocker-chick outfit — unfortunately, the colors and tailoring are all wrong, says fashion expert Danna Weiss. Pairing a short skirt with ankle boots cuts off her legs and makes her appear stumpy. The gray shapeless shirt gives Hilary a boxy look and doesn't flatter her skin tone. She should keep the skirt, but add kitten heels (not in puke green!) and a girly pink top.

Hilary's winning look

Hilary looks best when she wears feminine tops with slimming pants.

"She should go straight to detention."
— Costello

Double fault

Serena Williams' full top and micromini make this schoolgirl look seem unbalanced. She should even it out by swapping the tiny skirt for boot-cut pants, notes Weiss.

strike out, but can these Oops! outfits be saved?

"I've never seen chapped breasts before!"
— Costello

Liar, liar chest on fire

Jami Gertz needs a lot more support in the bust from this flimsy top. She should pair the shawl with a simpler turquoise tube top with a built-in bra, says Weiss.

"Orange you glad she's not a stylist?"
— Costello

It's the Great Pumpkin!

Columnist Cindy Adams has a serious case of color overload, Weiss explains. Pair the orange pants with a black jacket to make color an accent, not the main attraction.

"She dusted off her old prom dress."
— Costello

Red-hot not!

"Everything must go," Weiss says of Sally Kirkland's ill-fitting outfit. She should wear a satin jacket, tuxedo pants and a red blouse for a sophisticated look.
