Julia:

Frumpy to fab!

When Julia Roberts wowed red-carpet gazers with a stunning vintage Valentino dress on Oscar night in 2001 — and won the best-actress statuette! — the pretty woman’s fashion status skyrocketed. But since then, the laid-back vibe of her Taos, N.M., home has infiltrated her sense of style. “She seemed to be saying, ‘I don’t care,’” says image consultant Danna Weiss. Her fashion choices went from glitzy to granola, with oversize dresses that made her look two sizes bigger, chunky shoes and minimal jewelry. Even her hair was in a rut: mousy-brown locks pulled into a ponytail.

But it looks like the Ocean’s Twelve star’s style mojo is back. She stepped out on Oct. 14 in a formfitting Badgley Mischka dress, diamonds and strappy heels. “She’s reminding us she’s a force,” says Weiss.

BEFORE

“Realistically, fashion isn’t the first thing on her mind,” says image consultant Danna Weiss of Julia’s less-than-flattering style.

NOW

Back on track! “With her sexy outfit, Julia’s showing us that she remembers how to pull out all the stops!” says Weiss.
